

Hardback 9781137463968
Jul 2015 £60.00 £42.00
$95.00 $66.50

240 pp 216 mm x 138 mm

Ebook(s) available from Palgrave Connect, Kobo Books, Amazon Kindle, Mylibrary, Dawson ERA, Waterstone's, ebooks.com, Google eBookstore (UK), NetLibrary, Gardners Books, OCLC, Barnes & Noble, Inc.

Elena Oliete-Aldea is Lecturer at the Department of English of the University of Zaragoza, Spain. She belongs to several research groups on film and cultural studies and her main areas of interest include filmic representations of cultural identities and international relationships in the context of globalisation in transnational Anglophone cinema.

Hybrid Heritage on Screen The 'Raj Revival' in the Thatcher Era

Elena Oliete-Aldea

Special Offer - 30% off with this flyer

'Interweaving the colonial and the post-colonial, this new book examines key cinematic and TV texts, as well as literature about the British Raj that makes it to the British screens in the 1980s through an engaging and nuanced interrogation of heritage and hybridity. This is a fine piece of scholarship that efficiently crosses boundaries from film and cultural studies to social and cultural history.'

- Rajinder Dudrah, University of Manchester, UK

'Elena Oliete-Aldea provides a meticulous analysis of the British Raj productions of the Thatcher decade. She cogently argues that these highly popular films and TV series promoted a 'lost' British identity while simultaneously acting as a commodification of the nation's cultural heritage. Oliete-Aldea's valuable study will be of great interest to scholars and students of postcolonial studies.'

- Felicity Hand, Autonomous University of Barcelona, Spain

About the book

Conflicts in terms of cultural and ethnic identities characterise the increasingly multi-cultural and globalised societies of our time. In Great Britain, the 'Thatcher decade' marked a watershed in British society, bringing about important changes in the political, economic, social and cultural reality of the country. Integrating a methodical textual analysis within a comprehensive cultural approach, Elena Oliete-Aldea offers a vibrant study of the hybridity, fluidity and contingency of identity construction in Britain and explores how contested power relations constantly intertwine discourses of gender, class and ethnicity.

Hybrid Heritage on Screen examines how the so-called 'Raj Revival' cinematic productions of the 1980s disclose the contradictions, fractures and inconsistencies of the Thatcher era. Due to its dynamic interdisciplinary approach, the book is an invaluable study for film and cultural studies scholars and students, as well as filmgoers interested in cinema as a social, historical and cultural product.

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements
Introduction
1. The Porosity of Identity Boundaries
2. Britain in the 1980s: The Thatcher Decade
3. British Cinema and the Raj Revival
4. 'On Heroes': Bapu Goes West
5. History in Literary Adaptations
6. The Raj on TV
Conclusion: Cohabiting In Hybridity?
Appendix. Selected Filmography
References
Index

*Special offer with this flyer valid until 31st December 2015

This price is available to individuals only. This offer is not available to our trade and library customers. Offer only valid outside Australasia & Canada. Orders must be placed direct with Palgrave Macmillan.

To order your copy at this special price, visit www.palgrave.com and quote discount code PM15THIRTY, or email your order to the address below

